MONDAY EVENING, APRIL 1, 1861.

It seems that the Administration, before finally determining upon the execution of Fort Sumter, has been waiting the action of the South Carolina Convention upon a proposition to out Major Anderson's supplies. This, we suppose, is a specimen of Old Abe's backbone.

The Journal admonishes the editor of the Newark North American, for forbear expressing any opinion as to what the policy of the Administration should be toward the South, "until Lincoln's policy is made public before requiring it to be one thing or the other." By receiving the admonition of the Journal, its cotemporary may be either "puppy" or "pig," as the case requires; and hence, the importance of the admonition of the Journal. When will Mr. Lincoln make his "policy" public? Will the Journal inform us?

There is to be "no coaxing or compelling the Seceders," says the Washington correspondent of the Cincinnati Commercial. Is there to be any coaxing of the Slave States that have not yet seceded? On this point, the Administration adds organs as silent as the grave. But the country demands an answer, and will not rest until one is given in direct and unequivocal terms, or the Administration is hurled from power.

The Journal is sorry to see some Republican papers exhibit an unkind feeling toward Cal. Senators. The reason it assigns for its regret is that Sen. Seward "represents a large element of our (the Republican) party, which we (they) are eager to recognize in all political canvasses and which give backbone, courage and directness to our (their) purposes, where they would otherwise be very often wanting." That is a frank admission. It wants Seward promoted to a foreign mission, not because of his qualifications, but because he is useful to the party, and is the representative of an element in the organization, holding the most intense anti-slavery, disunion sentiments. That is why the Journal is sorry to see some Republican papers speak unkindly of Seward. He has backbone, and is ready to encourage and promote the John Browners in all their misadventures and wicked designs. He and his squad of lawless men—for he represents an element opposed to all law and all religion—answer the "purpose" the Republican party have in view, and therefore the Journal is anxious that they shall participate in all the honors and emoluments which Mr. Lincoln has to bestow, which they have "merited" of the highest character.

The Two Disunion Governments.

The people scarcely seem to realize the fact that there are, existing at this moment in this country, two separate and independent Governments or Confederacies. Such is the case, nevertheless. The one Government, that at Washington, a legitimate under the Constitution of the United States; the other, that at Montgomery, is illegitimate, unrecognized by that Constitution, but existing, not of right, but in fact merely.

The object of the latter is to divide and dismember the Federal Union heretofore existing, and establish a separate and independent Confederacy, composed of as many States as will unite for that purpose. Its essential and avowed element is Disunion. It seeks to sever the bond heretofore existing between the States, and nullify the compact originally entered into by the old thirteen States, and according to the States since admitted into the Union. This, then, is both a disunion and revolutionary Government.

It is promoting the cause of the Disunionists and Revolutionists, who are plotting the destruction of the Union, both in the North and the South.

But the Disunion movement, which the Republican Administration is promoting, will not stop with the dismemberment of the Cotton States. The Border Slave States will not be satisfied to remain in the Union with the fearful odds that will be against them, when the Cotton States are cut off, unless some reasonable guarantees are granted them that their rights will be respected by the Free States majority. If the Administration shall refuse, as it is likely to do, to yield these guarantees, and should it be insisted in that refusal by a majority of the people in the Northern States, the Border Slave States will, no matter whether the Union is preserved, and then other Western States may be expected to follow their example, until the United States, as it existed six months ago, shall be completely disintegrated and broken up.

The London Times on the Morrill Tariff.

Self-interest is likely to prove more powerful among the English Abolitionists, than the promptings of conscience on a question of principle. In discussing the Morrill Tariff, the London Times, of the 12th of March, says: "We may be said to be already in possession of the fruits of the American disruption. The secession of so many of the States on Congress conferred the right upon the North to undisturbedly enjoy the fruits. They have not been slow to avail themselves of this right. They have taken the most effectual measures to secure the fruits of the disruption. They have taken the most effectual measures to secure the fruits of the disruption. They have taken the most effectual measures to secure the fruits of the disruption."

Not a single appointment has been made in or from the Border Slave States acceptable to those States. The Administration of the Government is as completely sectional as it is possible to make it. The Republicans have hitherto complained that an undue proportion of the Federal offices have been filled from the South. We now see how they have filled them in the first few weeks that they have been in power. Still they declare that they are friendly to the South. The country will duly appreciate such professions of friendship, when followed by such a practice.

About the Way Uncle Sam is Fleeing.

A humorous individual writes a letter from Washington to the Nashville Patriot, in which he shows up the economy of the Federal Government in the following style:

The way the Government gets its work done is in a most economical manner. It is a family matter in the convention of the whole, and a resolution authorizing the construction of a hen-coop in your back yard. You at once appoint me superintendent of the work, putting a thousand or two dollars in the back for me to check on. I get out to appoint my brother-in-law chief engineer.

I appoint two of my brothers assistant superintendents, and my brother-in-law appoints two of his brothers assistant engineers—all at their expense. I then direct the chief engineer to buy and ride around town, drink cock-tails and play billiards, until the bank deposit gives out. When we make out a printed report of service, three pages, furnishing you a complete survey of your back yard, and a vast amount of statistical information with regard to the number of hens you are likely to have for the next few years. We wind up the report with the announcement that the site of the hen-coop has been selected, and a call for another appropriation to proceed with the work, which we assure you will be done with "economy."

The Plan of Ignorance.

Mr. Lincoln solemnly promised in his inaugural that the whole policy of the Government should be to "hold and possess" the property of the seceding States. With this in view, we are not surprised to find that the Government is endeavoring to suppress the truth, and to keep the people in ignorance of the real state of the case. It is a plan of ignorance, and it is a plan of suppression.

Evil Effects of the New Tariff.

Much anxiety is felt by the different members of the Administration in regard to the working of the new tariff. It is a tariff of protection, and it is a tariff of suppression. It is a tariff of ignorance, and it is a tariff of suppression.

The Election of Senator.

The Mac-Clellan Press, the most far-reaching and astute Republican press in Ohio, thus speaks of the election of JOHN SHERMAN and the antagonists in the Republican party in Ohio:

There is a more serious matter than this. We have often spoken of the difference in feeling between the two parties. It is a difference of feeling, and it is a difference of suppression. It is a difference of ignorance, and it is a difference of suppression.

The Northern and Southern Tariffs Compared.

Subjoined is a table of the principal imports, with the duties of each tariff, from which it will be seen that in most cases the duty is double, or 100 per cent. greater, at the North than at the South:

Stump Orators at Washington.

A Washington correspondent crowds considerable human nature in the following:

The Burgh Divorce Case.

A correspondent writing from Chicago to the Milwaukee Democrat, says:

Appropriations of the Confederate States.

The Universal Good Remedy in Cases of Whooping Cough.

There are probably more cases of Whooping Cough than of any other disease in the world. It is a disease of the lungs, and it is a disease of suppression.

Any of our readers afflicted with Scrophulous or Scrophulous complaints, will do well to read the following article. It is a disease of the lungs, and it is a disease of suppression.
